

GERMAN FORCES EITHER IN BRUSSELS OR WITHIN STRIKING DISTANCE NOW

REPORTS FROM FIGHTING IN BELGIUM SHOW DECIDED GERMAN ADVANCE.

REPORTS MOST MEAGRE

Even Admit the Kaiser's Army Gains Advantages in Battle Being Waged.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, August 20.—The British embassy here today received from its foreign office a summary of the naval and military situation to date.

Colville Barclay, the charge, sent a copy to Secretary Bryan.

Since the declaration of war, the British has been responsible for the safety of the expeditionary force which completed its disembarkation in France on August 18, which was effected in perfect order and without a casualty.

The work of the navy, in the Atlantic and elsewhere in safeguarding the trade routes, is best exemplified by the fact that at Lloyd's yesterday the war risk rate fell to forty schillings per cent for almost any voyages of British vessels, whereas the rate to insure freight of coin paid by steamers from the United States to a British port is thirty schillings per cent.

The German fleet outside the Baltic is confined to harbors. English commerce is almost normal. German seaborne commerce is paralyzed.

The only casualty is the loss of the light cruiser Amphion, blown up by a mine after having sunk the German mine layer, Koenigin Louise. One German submarine has been sunk in the North Sea.

The military position is as follows:

The German forces at present extend from the north in the neighborhood of Basel through Liege to a point in Belgium to the east of Antwerp and near the Dutch frontier. Outstanding features of the operation up to the present has been delayed caused to the contemplated German offensive across the Meuse by the defense of Liege where the forts are still intact. It has permitted the orderly mobilization and concentration of French army and British expeditionary force. German troops have now crossed the Meuse both above and below Liege, and are gaining some ground slowly westward but their advance cavalry has been continually checked by the Belgians.

In the south where the German armies are apparently on the defensive, the French are advancing.

DEATH RATES IN THE EUROPEAN WAR ZONE

The death rate per 1,000 of the population in the various countries of Europe prior to the outbreak of the European war is shown in the following table. Obviously these ratios will suffer a tremendous increase during the period of the war.

Austria-Hungary	23.99
Germany	19.52
Italy	23.23
Russia	23.61
France	17.50
Great Britain	17.16

ing on along line into Alsace and Lorraine, a great extent of which they now occupy, after driving back in several engagements the troops opposed to them."

London, Aug. 20, 6:45 p. m.—A dispatch to the Star from Brussels says that the German occupation of Brussels is imminent.

The burgomaster of the Belgium capital has ordered the civic guard to disarm.

Belgians Fall Back.

London, Aug. 20, 6:35 p. m.—The following information was given out by the official bureau this afternoon: "The Belgian field army, confronted by superior numbers, has fallen back. The Belgian troops have performed their duty in delaying the hostile advance and enabling their allies to complete their concentration."

Bare Announcement.

Paris, Aug. 20, 10:22 a. m.—The communication given out by the French war department this morning was one of the briefest for some days. It announced only the bare fact of an important development now in progress in Belgium and added that there was nothing new along the front in Alsace-Lorraine.

News Meager.

London, Aug. 20.—The almost complete absence of news from the theatre of war today is the best evidence that big events are in progress which will test the real caliber of the battalions today engaged in the "New Waterloo" or the "New Sedan."

That the German advance is being pushed with vigor and determination and can be safely asserted, judging from the intelligence permitted to the outside world. On both banks of the Meuse the Germans are crowding southward toward the entrenched French army waiting to stem their progress toward Sedan and Paris.

The invaders already have reached a point less than twenty miles from Sedan. To the northward their advanced troops have reached the river Dyle, almost midway between Brussels and Antwerp.

Belgians Retiring.

Before this northward rush the Belgian forces are retreating in Antwerp. In Brussels, they call this a strategic retreat. Whether the movement is strategic or forced the Germans have gained much ground in the direction of Brussels. Should the Belgians, however, take advantage of this tempting opening for a raid on the Belgian capital, they may find the now retreating Belgian army sweeping down on them from behind.

"All is going well for our arms," continued to be the tenor of official French dispatches concerning the situation in Alsace-Lorraine.

The official information bureau this afternoon announced that communication with Brussels since early this morning has been difficult.

Occupied Alsace.

Paris, Aug. 20.—The reoccupation of Meulhausen, Alsace, by French troops is announced officially here today.

The capture of Meulhausen was preceded by a very severe battle, during which the French troops took one of the suburbs at the point of the bay-

EXCITING JOURNEYS TO REACH AMERICA

MRS. DAVID W. HOLMES, MISS ELIZABETH, MASTER DAVID AND DRS. WOODS AND NUZUM REACH JANESVILLE.

MANY STILL ABROAD

Holmes Party in Paris When War Actually Began—Flight Across France to Reach England.

Wednesday evening the first returned European voyagers reached Janesville after most exciting experiences in France and England before being able to secure passage across the Atlantic. Others from this city are still, either in the war zone itself, or engaged in perhaps fortunate escape to some neutral port, or on some one of the few passenger steamers still sailing.

Mrs. David Holmes, her daughter Elizabeth and Master David, and Drs. Woods and T. W. Nuzum, who also reached Janesville, were in London during the war scare but talked with many who had actual experiences in the troubled zone in reaching safety.

Mrs. Holmes and children were in Paris when the war was declared. Between Germany and France stopping at the Hotel de Calais. The call for the mobilization of troops had already been issued and fighting on the frontier had actually begun. From the French capital, their tinsome and dangerous journey across the English channel, the anxiety in England to secure passage home and the trip on the Royal George of the Canadian Pacific steamship company with nine hundred other American refugees, the hardships and passing evening in the streets, the grinding on the merged berg and their arrival in Montreal Tuesday night, all prove a most graphic story.

Since morning found the hotel almost deserted by servants, called to the war by mobilization order. The guests were forced to go into the kitchen and prepare their own breakfast. The morning march to the depot. The travellers had been told that it would be impossible to take their larger luggage, so it was left at the hotel. One railway station they had to wait for a long time. The Gar de Lyon. Here the soldiers were being sent to the mobilization points and travellers seeking safety in flight and the soldiers were being sent to the mobilization points.

Deciding to go to Dieppe, via Newhaven, the Holmes party made a long journey in safety and reached the channel steamer. At the docks there were no porters, but the men travellers placed the hand baggage on the steamer. The little channel steamer was overloaded, the passage extremely rough and the journey across five hours, the longest of the trip. England and London Sunday evening. Here came a new problem. No hotel accommodations, the city being crowded with travellers who had fled from the continent. The travellers were found, and then began the anxious days and nights before passage could be obtained for America.

When we left Paris, we had to leave our hotel bill unpaid and I had goods at various shops which could not be delivered as their helpers had left for the war. Confusion everywhere. The streets of Paris were filled with excited crowds cheering and singing. Hotels crowded with Americans who did not seem to realize the real dangers of the war.

Smaller hotels closing owing to lack of help, the railway depots stacked high with baggage of those who had fled that could not take their baggage with them, and just part of the experiences we had.

"We heard of stories of women who had undergone lots of hardships, had been forced to stand up in the trains, leaving German cities while soldiers took the seats, of lack of food, riding in baggage trains and read of insults and shooting of spies and Americans suspected of being spies, but actually saw nothing of this. Only read of it or heard it repeated. In London the Americans organized to help each other. There was a great meeting at the Hotel Savoy for those who were without funds or friends."

WAR IS STIMULANT TO PAPER INDUSTRY

Ashland Concern Prepares to Double Output to Meet Increased Demand.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Ashland, Aug. 20.—The manager of the Ashland Paper company announced today that it has increased its output to double the capacity of the mill. It now produces about one hundred tons per month of light weight paper, and is making paper, paper towels and duplicate paper for typewriters. The output will be doubled before snow flies and the number of employees will be nearly doubled.

European war has greatly stimulated the paper trade, and American manufacturers believe that they will establish new fields of trade which they expect to hold after the war.

BADGER STATE HAS MUCH MARSH LAND

Between Two and Three Million Acres in Northern Counties Could Be Made Productive.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 20.—Wisconsin has between two and one-half and three million acres of marsh land, much of which by proper drainage and soil management could be made productive and would add greatly to the farm area of the state. A bulletin on the improvement of marsh lands, issued by the university today, tells of the marsh problem and of methods of reclaiming these tracts. The means proposed is to warm them by draining of the excess water, plow and cultivate them carefully in order to prepare a good bed for the seed, add the fertilizing elements which are lacking, and sow and plant crops which are suited to such soils. While a part of the marsh area is in large marshes of from 25,000 to 50,000 acres, by far the largest area is in small tracts scattered over a large portion of the state.

EX-SOLDIERS AND SAILORS OF ROCK COUNTY MET TODAY

19th Annual Reunion Took Place This Afternoon Following the Big Infantry Gathering Yesterday.

After a successful gathering and reunion of the 13th Wisconsin veteran volunteers' infantry, held yesterday at the East Side I. O. O. F. hall on South Main street of this city, an even larger gathering representing the Rock county ex-soldiers and sailors assembled at the same hall today, and held their 19th annual reunion.

Up to one o'clock forty-six names had been registered. This attendance of veterans was not as large as on Wednesday, but a sufficient number of their wives and members of the Woman's Relief Corps were in attendance to make the gathering larger than the Wednesday list totaled.

Promptly at twelve o'clock dinner was served by the W. R. C. ladies, followed by a conversational hour, in which everyone present enjoyed interesting tales and stories of the civil war days.

Raymond J. Deloit, was the speaker of the afternoon. The address of welcome was given by J. F. Carle of this city. Following is a list of the veteran ex-soldiers and sailors who registered today at the reunion: Almon Baldwin, D. H. Loomis, H. George J. Gaylor, C. B. Osgood, E. H. Resseguie, Lyman Morse, Janesville; A. Alder, Edgerton; David Carter, Johnston; A. D. Burdick, Milton; C. A. Wright, New York City; James Black, Shopiere, W. G. Milwaukie; R. D. Phelps, Green Bay; J. R. Butler, Wausau; P. D. Scofield, Des Moines, Iowa; A. C. Grasse, Milton Junction; B. F. Lee, William Andrews, O. E. Jass and Capt. Robert Oller, Rockford, Illinois.

One son of veterans, L. W. McComb, of Stoughton, was present.

The officers for the past year and up to today's meeting were, President, Almon Baldwin; vice-president, J. F. Carle, Janesville; secretary, W. A. Mayhew, Clinton; and treasurer, H. A. Anderson, also of Clinton.

A life and drum corps composed of a few of the veterans played about an hour this morning on Main street previous to the call for dinner.

CONGRESS MAY VOTE TO CARRY WAR RISKS

Bill Providing for $5,000,000 Insurance Fund for American Ships is Now Being Urged.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Aug. 20.—The bill to provide $5,000,000 war risk insurance by the government for ships of American registry during the European war was ordered favorably reported today by the senate commerce committee after a brief hearing.

Hearings on the bill began today in the house and senate committees. Before the house commerce committee, Majority Leader Underwood declared that while the government ought not to engage in the marine insurance business as a permanent venture, the present bill was urgently necessary as an emergency measure.

"There is no desire to set up a perpetual this war risk insurance bill. It is purely an emergency measure. I do not believe it will cost the government a dollar, the premiums more than meeting the charges for losses."

Before the senate committee, bankers, shipbuilders and others, after a conference with Secretary McAdoo, expressed opinion on the various conditions resulting from the European war.

Seth Low of New York headed the business conferees. They explained that approximately three hundred foreign-built ships were ready to depart for American registry if they could get government war risk insurance.

Youths Carrying Messages for Red Cross, Are Disheartened Because They Are Not Government Men.

Paris, Aug. 20.—The Boy Scouts of France, some thousands of them from nine to fifteen years old, have felt badly because although they were carrying messages for the Red Cross, they were not under orders from the war office. Adolph Messimy, French war minister, has taken them under his protection. They are still serving the Red Cross admirably in carrying messages, but they feel that they are in the military service as their fathers are.

May Adjourn Conclave.

PLANS FOR CONCLAVE

Either Italy or Holland, Two Important Neutral Countries, Will Be Chosen for Election of Successor.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Rome, August 20.—"Together in one all things," in Christ, these words which Pope Pius X. set as his motto in an encyclical issued on August 10, 1903, six days after he had been elevated to the pontificate, were on his lips as he died.

The end, which came at 1:20 o'clock was peaceful. A few moments before he had been roused from semi-consciousness. He attempted to bestow a blessing upon those gathered in the chamber, but his strength failed. After a pause he murmured a ritual text and did not speak again.

Death Long Expected.

The death of the pontiff in the eightieth year of his life, and the twelfth of his pontificate, while long anticipated because of illness incident to his advanced age, came as a shock to those near him. For several days he has been suffering from gouty catarrh, but on Tuesday his physician declared that the trouble was of no great importance, and yesterday reassuring reports concerning the patient were current.

The change came suddenly during the afternoon, those in attendance announced that death was imminent.

War Hastens End.

Similar attacks had been related with the aid of the Pope's will-power, but depression over the clash of arms in Europe militated against another recovery.

At ten o'clock last night the pontiff experienced an attack of coughing that greatly distressed him. He could not move, and he had no assistance, and the struggle he made to breathe was painful to witness. As the supreme moment approached the coughing ceased and the restlessness which the doctors had been unable to relieve appeared. The features of the patient which had given evidence of his pain, resumed a normal expression except for the pallor which increased.

Group at Death-Bed.

The papal secretary of state, Cardinal Marileval, Cardinals Peratacagliano and Bisslet, the Pope's two sisters and physician, who were at the bedside recognized the calm preceding the end. Doctor Marchisio, his hand on the pontiff's pulse, turned toward the papal secretary who was near, and shook his head. Cardinal Marileval understood and covered his face. Meantime Cardinal Vannutelli, the Pope's niece, Paola, his major-domo, Monsignor Bianchi, Monsignor Micalilli and his secretary, Monsignor Brescin and Monsignor Pescini, had joined the group in the chamber.

Two sisters and the Pope's secretary could not restrain their sobs and their voices seemed to bring back the pontiff from the state into which he had lapsed. His eyes opened and his lips moved, and it was plain that he was making an effort to impart a final blessing. For a moment it seemed that dissolution had taken place, and the lips moved again.

Whispers Blessing.

"Together in one all things in Christ," he whispered. Dr. Marchisio released the wrist which dropped pulseless on the pontiff's breast. The ters that the conclave for the election of a new pope may be adjourned. The reason is that under the present circumstances it might be disastrous for the British, French and Belgian cardinals to meet with their Austrian and German colleagues. At Westminster cathedral, however, it was thought that a postponement of the conclave was most unlikely.

Are Catholics First.

Cardinal Bourne's secretary said: "We are first of all Catholics, rather than nationals. The presence of a pope is now more than ever necessary. Cardinal Bourne is starting next Saturday to attend the conclave."

The same astronomical influences that are said to have brought about the turbulence in Europe may also be blamed for the disquiet and unrest that has held forth on our ball fields this season. It is being declared that more rowdyism has been staged in the National and American leagues this year than for a long while. Tensions have either been bitterly reviled by players and spectators or else have actually attacked and severely belabored with fists. It seems that hardly a day has passed in the big league games that several players have not been fastened to the bench for unsportsmanlike behavior. The fines and suspensions with which Johnson and Tener have tried to check these unfortunate scenes have availed little, it would seem, as the rowdyism still goes on. Many declare that the managers are mostly to blame. Quite a few of them have not only made little effort to restrain their players in these heated demonstrations, but have actually taken active part in the brawls themselves. The American league has been the worst offender in this. Frank Chance, Joe Birmingham, Clark Griffith and Kid Gleason, assistant manager of the White Sox, have all been suspended and rebuked for their unsportsmanlike behavior. In the National league only two managers have forgotten themselves, the same being Huggins of the Cards and Charlie Herzog of the Reds.

Jim Corbett tells a similar story. He was taking on all comers on a tour and appearing in Philadelphia and he discovered that a great towering brute from a mine somewhere in that region was very anxious to meet him. The large scrappy person was first on hand at the theatre, but Corbett's managers took care to overlook him. But as Corbett was playing several different theatres in various parts of the town and the large person was on hand to battle in every evening's performance, they soon found that it was hard to avoid him. The crowds finally began to get wise and to demand that Corbett fight the huge man. Newly crowned champs seldom care to take a chance with their titles against some unknown who might with one lucky punch swing spool everything. After quite a bit of maneuvering Corbett was able to escape the crowd was somewhat displeased. Corbett himself trembled each evening when he found the big man out in front of the crowd.

STATE OF WASHINGTON TO PROPOSE BOXING LAW SIMILAR TO WISCONSIN'S

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Seattle, Wash., Aug. 20.—It seemed assured today that a bill providing for a state boxing commission will be introduced into the state legislature at its next session in January, 1915. Dan Salt, a Seattle boxing promoter, is favoring the idea and has drafted a model bill passed on the New York, Montana and Wisconsin laws. The bill provides, among other things, for five commissioners to constitute the state boxing board; that all bouts shall be ten rounds, no decision affairs; that all promoters shall deliver $2,500 with the commission to be forfeited if the law is violated; that no boxer shall be matched with a man outweighing him more than ten pounds; and that the commission shall exact a fee of 5 per cent of the gross receipts, thus guaranteeing the state.

GERMANY'S DEFY.

Germany is not to accept Japan's orders and quietly withdraw from its eastern possessions without a battle. It has decided to call Japan's bluff and in consequence we may expect to see complications arise in the east which may involve other nations beside those already at war. Germany resents England's seeking the aid of its Japanese ally, but at the same time it is ready to involve Turkey in the strife as its own France resents this last move but brings into the struggle on the continent of Europe, soldiers from its African colonies. It is a case of the pot calling the kettle black when one nation resents the introduction of the yellow or black races into the present struggle for it is safe to say every advantage possible will be taken by the warring countries in their advantage, regardless of previous condition of servitude, color or religion.

Voters in both assembly districts in Rock county will do well to weigh carefully the merits of the aspirants for the assembly now seeking their vote at the September primary. In the first district Mr. Barless and Mr. Whitte, both stand for lower taxes and a business administration of state affairs. The only question is, which is better fitted for the position? That is up to the voter to decide. Mr. Whitte has served one term in the assembly and has had experience that would prove valuable to him in the coming fight. Mr. Barless has long demonstrated his business ability in public office. Both are good men and the choice is a hard one to make. In the second district there should be no hesitancy on the part of the voter to endorse Albert J. Winegar, who stands for good government and whose platform is made up of the planks of the firmest material, that of reduction of taxes and a business administration of state affairs. His opposition stands on his record. An examination of this will be sufficient to bring about his defeat in face of the high taxes and waste of public money, brought about by the last legislature of which he was a member.

Janesville is recovering from the excitement of its first fair week in many years. Taking it all in all it was a wonderful display, even considering the fact that it was a first effort. The stock shown in the swine, sheep, cattle and horse departments was surprising, while the interest in the other departments demonstrated that the Janesville fair is here to stay and need not be "wrapped up in tissue paper and moth balls" as an irate Line City resident suggested. This week Evansville entertains the fair visitors and reports from there show that it, too, is holding a wonderful fair that would pay anyone to visit.

Farmers throughout the county are carefully weighing the merits of the various candidates for the office of sheriff. The sentiment that a man who has held the office once, unless unusually well qualified for it, should not be given endorsement for a second term, is gaining ground rapidly. The office is one that needs particular qualifications and the mere ability to appoint deputies for political work done, and serve papers, is not an argument in favor of any particular candidate. It is a question worth considering carefully before a vote is filed on primary day.

On The Spur of The Moment

Those Cuts.
The doctor says: "Get lots of air. Don't stay inside at all. Get out and ramble in the woods. And know the joys of fall. The air inside is always bad. With health it raises hob. But if I follow his advice I can't hold down my job."

Another one says: "Take up golf; 'Tis one health giving game. Look what it's done for old John D.; For you 'twill do the same. Just play that game from morn till night."

They tell me all that I can do. To keep what health I've got, Is to go on an ocean cruise. Upon some private yacht. I ought to stay a year or two. For less would be a crime; All that I need to do that thing Is just the yacht and time.

The "Rest Cure." Ah! That is the thing. The best thing I've heard; could do that with great ease. Although it sounds absurd. You simply lie in bed six months. And do not bat an eye. The trouble is I'd surely starve to death, and that's no lie.

A Good Job.

"Have you got everything?" asked the householder anxiously, as he peered at the burglar from beneath the bed clothes.

"Did you get my daughter's fidelity?"

"Yes."

"My son's phonograph?"

"Yes."

"My wife's bridge outfit?"

"Yes."

"Her tight skirt?"

"Yes."

"My mother-in-law's parrot?"

"Yes."

"My daughter's camera?"

"Yes."

"Well, call at my office tomorrow morning and I'll give you $50. You have done a good night's work."

"Right-o," replied the burglar, as he turned with his sack to climb out of the window.

"Just a moment," said the householder. "Bring three or four pairs to-morrow night and take my daughter's piano and I'll double the reward."

'Twill get you, anyhow.

HOW NEXT PONTIFF WILL BE SELECTED BY THE CARDINALS

Balloting Takes Place After Cardinals Gather and All Others Are Excluded: Are Locked in "Cells" Until Choice Is Made.

There will be great difficulty in the way of the gathering of the cardinals in Rome for the election of a successor to Pius X because of the war in Europe and the precarious condition of shipping to Rome. To travel across the European continent will be fraught with great danger and possibilities of delay. The cardinals are so closely knit together and the boundaries are so close that traveling at present will be far from safe and secure.

What part Italy is to take in the war adds another uncertain quantity to this great gathering of Cardinals, which is such a stupendous event in the eyes of the great Christian church whom they represent.

Concerning the election itself the preparations for a conclave are exceedingly intricate and interesting. The Cardinals gather at St. Peter's, entering first the Sala del paramenti, or Hall of Vestments, from which they are admitted to the rooms that are to be used for the purpose of the conclave. Each Cardinal has a small, simply furnished apartment, called a "cell." The rooms are numbered, and each is marked with the name of the Cardinal who is to occupy it. The lower rows of pines in the loggia, which look out upon the Court of Damascus, are opaque.

The Cardinals are escorted to the Sistine Chapel for prayers and religious ceremonies, in which the choir of the chapel takes part. The Cardinals wear their red biretta. A call goes forth "exeat omnes" and every one but the Cardinals must leave the chapel. The Cardinals recite the litany of Loreto and chant a hymn to the Blessed Sacrament. The double entrances are thrown open, and the head of the ancient house of Chigi, a prince, enters with his suite. The prince is the marshal of the conclave, a right hereditary in his family since 1712, before which it was vested in the Vavelli family as far back as the fourteenth century.

Princes Recite Solemn Oath. The prince recites his oath in a loud voice thus:

"I, Prince Chigi-Albani, perpetual marshal of the conclave, deputized to direct the surveillance of the apostolic palace and swear that I will be faithful to the Sacred College of the most eminent and reverend Cardinals of the Holy Church; that with the greatest diligence and loyalty I will watch and guard the election of the Roman Pontiff; and that I will not allow or suffer any of the most eminent and reverend Cardinals, nor any of the people inclosed with them to infringe in any way on the established constitution of the Holy Fathers for the election of the Roman Pontiff. So help me God and His Holy Scriptures."

At the same time the secretary of the conclave in the Pauline Chapel is administering the oath to the cardinals, that is, the priests, one of whom is admitted to attend each Cardinal. All other attendants, cooks, laborers, etc., are also placed under oath.

After Prince Chigi, whose costume is a splendid cloak of black silk, retires with his suite, the prelates who are to guard the entrances to the conclave, the protonotaries, the prelates of the Rota, and the episcopal assistants to the throne, are sworn. One is selected to read the oath in full and the others respond by placing their hands upon a crucifix and New Testament and saying: "So help me God and His Holy Scriptures."

Now Ready for Business. The Cardinals are now assembled as they will be for the balloting. Each is seated at a desk, with a canopy over his head, the canopies over Cardinals created such by the last Pope being violet; those over the heads of cardinals created such by the last Pope's immediate successor being green. Candles are on the table and a silver stand made double for pen and ink.

The Cardinals remain about half an hour and each then retires to his apartment accompanied by a noble guard assigned to him, his conclavist and his servant. Then the conclave bell sounds for the first time—the "angelus"—the call for the first prayer in conclave.

At dusk three Cardinals, one of the rank of deacon, one priest and one Cardinal-bishop, go through all the apartments to be used for the conclave to see finally that no one remains improperly in the apartments, which has been sealed up and the keys to which, deposited in golden boxes, are in custody of Prince Chigi.

Now the conclave actually has begun, and they are ready to elect a new Pope upon whose choice the whole world rests its interest.

PAYING LIFE'S PRICES. We all want health, most of us have a craving for wealth, and there is a universal desire for happiness. Among the lesser things that we might add to this list are such qualities as courtesy and refinement, and such attributes as a well informed mind and an air of breeding.

How many of us realize that life offers us any of these things—if we will only pay the price.

There is nothing abnormal about health. Rather is ill health the abnormal forced upon us by our failure to pay the price. And in this case the price is the observance of a few simple rules of nature. We eat too much, sleep too little, exercise too little, play or work too hard. We do not pay the price, we are dunned with ill health.

There is nothing miraculous about wealth. Some achieve it by a very simple, straightforward route. They work hard and long, cultivating all the while the open eye for opportunity. They save much and spend little; they labor while others play. They pay for the wealth that is evidently theirs by sacrificing the creature comforts and enjoyments that most of us consider life unbearable without. Others achieve wealth by more devious routes, paying over their own finer qualities and justness of their fellow men in exchange. Others pay for it in loss of health, even life itself, as have many of our multi-millionaires, dead and buried long before the passing of the allotted three score and ten.

To achieve courtesy, or a reputation for it, to your list of qualities, you must pay in self control and self repression. You must be at the service of others, even though it means the sacrifice of your comfort. Refinement is similarly purchased. It means the painstaking elimination of rudeness and vulgarity and the cultivation of the opposite qualities.

Life's shop windows are full—but life is the inexorable creditor. You pay in advance and then pay over again, on the installment plan. Even when life, in seemingly benignant mood, showers her gifts upon some favored mortal, she exacts some price. Talent like Padrewski's, for instance, only reach its full fruit upon the payment of the price of the practice of exercises one day I notice it; if I neglect them a week my friends notice it; and if I neglect them for a month the world knows it.

A voice like Farrar's can only be acquired through careful training, and even then it cannot retain its purity and sweetness except under a regime of rigid self direction and denial. "A singer is the slave of his voice," some one has well said.

It is equally true that you, if you would achieve that thing you want of life, must be a slave to it—pay for it now and for ever after. You can get almost anything you want of life, but life runs no charge accounts, permits no bad bills.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Whoever has traveled life's dull round Where'er his stages may have been, May sigh to think he still has found The warmest welcome at an inn.

FROZEN DISHERS.

During the hot weather there are no more refreshing desserts than those which are frozen. There is an unlimited variety to call upon, fruit sherbets, using juices of fresh fruit, mouselines, trappes and parfaits, Sundae, which are so popular, can be easily made at home.

Water ices are always better and richer in flavor if the water and sugar are boiled together to form a sirup before adding the fruit juices.

A most acceptable frozen dish which is inexpensive and most wholesome is Velvet Sherbet.—Take the juice of three lemons, two cupsful of sugar and a quart of rich milk. Freeze as usual.

Peach Surprises Cream.—Peel and put through a sieve two quarts of peaches, add a pound and a half of sugar cooked with two cupsful of water to make a sirup. When the sirup is cool add six eggs, the peach pulp and put all together without beating, and freeze. The beating of the cream will mix the eggs while the freezing is going on.

Almond Ice Cream.—To a quart of cream, measure a cup of sugar, a half cup of shelled almonds and four tablespoonsful of orange juice. Blanch and roast the almonds and pound in a mortar. Put half the cream and all the sugar on to scald, then add the remaining cream and a teaspoonful of caramel and almonds, freeze and pack to ripen.

Cantaloupe Frappe.—Mix well together three pints of cantaloupe pulp, two cupsful of sugar, and the strained juice of three lemons. Freeze.

A plain ice cream with a hot maple sauce and chopped nuts makes a pleasant change.

Grape Ice.—Make a sirup of one and a half pounds of sugar, and one pint of water; bring to the boiling point and pour while hot over four pounds of ripe grapes, which have been mashed to a pulp. Let stand one hour, then rub through a sieve, add the juice of a lemon and partly freeze, add two eggs, whites well beaten, and finish freezing.

PARIS FORECASTS MILITARY STYLES

Ladies' Cloaks and Suits For Coming Winter Months To Take Decided Reverse, Is Firm Opinion.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 20.—"Military in mode and tone" is the dictum of Cleveland manufacturers for fall and winter styles in ladies' cloaks and suits. No longer will mildy appear in the sheer blousy waist and peg top skirt. Present styles in coats and jackets are deemed, for war and Paris has decreed that ladies' wear must be military.

Skirts will be plain, and only straight lines will be tolerated. Jackets and coats will also be plain and button close about the throat. Low or "V" necked waists too, will be replaced by stiff military collars and cuffs to match. Military's walk and carriage must conform strictly with her new mode in dress. A long straight skirt and stiff carriage of the body will be the only mode approaching good form. Meanwhile buyers and other people who lay down the law of dress are marooned in Paris, becoming fully imbued with the military spirit. They will be back soon with their trunks of samples. With them will come the military.

Peggy & Company

Peggy Uses Deception and the Enemy Sets a Snare for Himself.

"Ah, what a tangled web we weave When first we practice to deceive!" If the great moral truth of this might be conveyed in an impressive way to the understanding of our Peggy she would escape the distress that awaits her. And though the couplet above from the classics may be unfamiliar to her, the sense of it has been shown her since the days of Mother Goose.

In her foregatherings thus far with Mr. Anderson it has been unnecessary for Peggy to employ outright falsehood or unblushing lies. With many an artful little evasion she has contrived to be away from home at such times as her plans with her new friend required. Mother insisted upon no detailed recital of Peggy's activities, and presumed, in Peggy's absence, that daughter was engaged with other girls in their many unaccountable diversions. And so Peggy's afternoons away, of increasing frequency, were for some while unquestioned.

Peggy's greatest uneasiness in the matter was occasioned by the knowledge of Tom's understanding of her doings. She knew that Tom, in his own terms, was "wise." She also knew that he did not cordially approve. And while she felt sure he would say nothing for the while to the folks, she also felt his continual surveillance. She was able to sense vaguely a day of judgment.

There came an afternoon when Peggy found it needful, for the completion of her plans, to deceive the folks with what we will courteously call a fabrication. It has been said that the most fascinating driver of the scarlet devil to motor late to a country club and there has dinner. This would demand Peggy's absence from the evening meal at home. And after a brief struggle with a few anemic compunctions she offered mother explanations wholly untrue.

The prospect of the evening promised the greatest enjoyment to Peggy. Dinner on the clubhouse porch, out under the trees, with pleasant music and all the other amenities of such an occasion, seemed too much to her to be denied. How might she have known that some power was to interfere, scattering all these pretty fancies?

Every Day Talks To Every Day People

(BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.)

The material for today's talk has been kindly given us by a man who is an authority on the mosquito question, and who claims that there is no excuse for the existence of the same; that were a tenth of the wealth spent on the extermination of these insects there would be no malaria, or yellow fever. In consideration of the personal comfort to be derived from a country without the joyful little buzzers, the saving of lives and time and the increased value of thousands of acres that would result, it would seem that almost any amount expended would be worth while. In regard to the extermination work, the people for the most part are tolerant, but a bit incredulous. Our children are taught Greek, Latin, geometry, but are they taught how to prevent the breeding of mosquitoes around their own homes? No one aims to teach teaching children the higher branches, but a solid foundation of first aids is a thing to be de-

WISCONSIN BUNGALOW MURDER REVEALS STORY OF ARCHITECT AND "SOUL MATE"

Rules of the Wright bungalow; Mrs. Mamah Borthwick Cheney, Frank Lloyd Wright and hatchet used by negro in murders.

The recent murder at Spring Green, Wis., of Mrs. Mamah Borthwick Cheney and her two children by a crazed negro has brought to light the love story of Frank Lloyd Wright, noted Chicago architect, and Mrs. Cheney, who was his "soul mate." The romance began in 1909, when Wright and Mrs. Cheney made their "spiritual pilgrim" to Berlin. It ended with her death. At the time of her death Mrs. Cheney was living in Wright's bungalow, which was set on fire by the crazed negro following the murder.

Bridge for New Orleans. It seems that the project of a bridge over the Mississippi near New Orleans, first proposed in 1888, is to be put through. The original design was for a crossing about four or five miles above New Orleans, where no change of bed or banks has occurred in the recorded history of the river. The span of the cantilever bridge was to be 670 feet between centers of piers, the suspended span being 440 feet long and the anchor arms each 660 feet 8 inches in length. The foundations were to extend to 110 feet below water and were to rest on bed of firm sand. The piers were to be sunk by dredging through open wells or cylinders. The present plan calls for a double bridge, one deck for highway and electric railway travel and the other for railway service. Scientific American.

Heart and Home Problems

By Mrs. E. J. B. THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I wish you would give me some advice on the following questions:

(1) What is a good cure for a young lady who lives in this town who goes out riding at night with a bunch of young men?

(2) If she cared anything for me would she do this?

(3) I bought her a gold watch bracelet. Don't you think she should give it back to me?

MONISCO.

(1) I am sure I don't know. If you are not engaged to marry her she has a right to go with other men.

(2) I don't know. If you are not engaged to marry her she has a right to go with other men.

(3) I don't know. If you are not engaged to marry her she has a right to go with other men.

young men and no care for her.

(2) Perhaps she thinks you do not care for her.

(3) If it was an engagement present and the engagement has been broken, she should be obliged to do so. If you merely made her a present, without any obligations attached to it, she is not bound to return it to you because you don't like the company she keeps.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I love a boy who is one year my senior. One night at an ice cream social he took me to supper. He used to come to see me, but now he goes with another girl. I love this boy and wish he would love me. I wish I could go with him again. How can I get him to love me again? Please advise me.

(2) When I go to town I get many boys wink at me. What is meant by a wink? BLUE EYES.

(1) I doubt if the boy was ever in love with you, my dear, and you are not really in love with him. You just want him tagging around with you so you can have a beau—can't you see that? If he is not going to go with you he would be coming around. When he doesn't come around make up your mind that you can't get him to love you, simply because he does not care about you. So all you do is to look around and find a fellow who thinks more of you than the other girls—and you'll love him just as much as you think you love this one now.

(2) A boy who is anything of a gentleman does not wink at girls. I don't know what these boys mean by their winks, though. I am sure they do not mean anything respectful to you. Better not notice them. If you don't look at them they won't wink.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Could you please tell me something that would keep dark places out of a kitchen sink? I have tried coal oil and several other things, but they don't seem to take the dark places out of it.

Get five cents' worth of muriatic acid at the drug store. Have the sink as clean as possible, dry it well, then make a swab of cloth on the end of a wooden stick and use this to clean the sink with the muriatic acid. As the acid is a corrosive, do not get any of it on your hands. Wear rubber gloves if possible.

Do not let any of it stand around where children or animals could get at it, as it is a strong poison.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) We are four young ladies, all about eighteen years old, who are on the same street, about 90 pounds, and would like to become actresses, but there is one drawback—we have such enormous big feet. Could you advise us as to how we could make them look smaller?

(2) We also have a very dear gentleman friend, who insists on picking his nose. How could we tell him to stop this practice without hurting his feelings?

(3) I have a painful matter to cure large feet. Better wear shoes that fit and look happy.

(2) Just show him this; it ought to cure him.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I love a boy who is one year my senior. One night at an ice cream social he took me to supper. He used to come to see me, but now he goes with another girl. I love this boy and wish he would love me. I wish I could go with him again. How can I get him to love me again? Please advise me.

(2) When I go to town I get many boys wink at me. What is meant by a wink? BLUE EYES.

(1) I doubt if the boy was ever in love with you, my dear, and you are

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

To prevent dishes slipping when cooling in the refrigerator, take two or three discarded fruit jar rubbers, and place them on an irregular piece of ice. The dishes may rest on these rubbers in perfect safety.

In custards, in cooked salad dressings, Welsh rabbit and in all recipes depending on eggs alone for thickening, a little flour adds to the tastiness. Do not throw away skewer—either the metal or wooden kind. The metal ones are excellent for turning broiling steaks and chops (making only one puncture, where a fork makes two)—also for lifting boiled and roasted potatoes.

THE TABLE

Shad Roe Salad—Take one fresh roe and put it in cold slightly salted water; let come to boiling point, then simmer for twenty minutes, but do not boil to pieces. Drain and cool, then cut in half-inch slices with a sharp knife; marinate for two hours in the same dressing that is used for the "salad a la diable," only add the juice of one large onion and a bay leaf, and use tarragon instead of horse radish vinegar. When ready to serve, drain and lay in a bed of shad watercress and use for the sauce a quarter glass of red currant jelly melted in a half glass of port wine. Do not boil it, just beat enough to melt thoroughly. Garnish with green pepper ribbons.

Peanut Hash—Cream one tablespoonful of peanut butter with enough cold water to make a smooth paste, add three-quarters of a cup of finely chopped cooked potatoes. Mix well, then add one-half a teaspoonful of salt and one-quarter teaspoonful of pepper, with sufficient milk or water to moisten. Melt one tablespoonful of butter in a frying pan, fry in it one teaspoonful of finely minced onion for two minutes; add the potatoes and nuts and cook, with moderate heat, until a brown crust has formed over the bottom, as in making corned beef hash. Turn out upon platter and serve.

Peanut Rolls—Mix and sift together two cups of white flour, two cups of graham or entire wheat flour, eight teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Dissolve half a cup of peanut butter in one and a half cups of cold water and stir into the dry ingredients. Add one cup of chopped peanuts and roll three fourths of an inch thick. Cut out and bake fifteen or twenty minutes in a hot oven.

Macaroni and Peanuts—Cook one cup of macaroni, broken into one-inch pieces, in boiling salted water until tender, drain and pour cold water through it to separate the pieces. Then add cream sauce made with four tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour, one tablespoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper and two cups of milk and two cups of chopped peanuts. Pour into a buttered baking dish, cover with buttered crumbs and bake until golden brown in color.

Lima Beans With Pork Chops—Cook two pounds lima beans till soft; salt and pepper to taste, place in crock and cover with small pork chops; bake half hour or until brown; turn chops once to brown on both sides. Fine.

Old Potatoes With Sauerkraut—Peel and wash half gallon old potatoes, put to cook in plenty water, teaspoon salt, three tablespoons dripping or lard; when potatoes begin to get tender, put in a can of sauerkraut. Make drop dumpling batter, drop in, cook fifteen minutes. This makes a fine meal.

Veal Croquettes—Put left over veal through meat grinder (there should be two cups), grind or mash together four hard cooked eggs, one cup of cracker crumbs, one tablespoonful of butter. Mix thoroughly and moisten with one-half cup of milk; season with salt and pepper. Form into croquettes, dust with white of egg and roll in cracker crumbs. Fry in hot lard and serve with tomato sauce.

In the times country houses of the aristocracy, during the absence of the owners, were used as "Inns," or "boarding houses." It was then the rule to hang out as signs the arms of the owners; hence the origin of public-house signs.

Copyright A. C. McChesney & Co., 1914. Well, Brand had won. He had won $150,000, and so we find him at least not groveling. His quick response to a knock at the door brought his secretary. "A gentleman to see you," said that man. "A Mr. Meade." "That reporter?" "He wouldn't state his business, sir. Said you'd know him."

Now, ordinarily Brand would not have been in to reporters. He considered them a prying sort with entirely too much knowledge of other people's business and too great a thirst for more. But we have said that he was happy. Some irrelevant thought, too, flickered through his mind; some inexplicable curiosity to see whether this particular reporter had an overcoat. For it had grown colder since that night at Staten Island and Brand thought that if this young man didn't have a topcoat—well, let Dick answer. "Show him in," were the secretary's orders. He obeyed, and withdrew.

Brand did not rise, but his greeting was cordial. "Sit down Mr. Meade and make yourself at home," he invited. "I can do the one, but not the other," the reporter replied. "A little too grand up here for me. Once more I suppose you're surprised to see me."

"No, the same answer goes, my friend, as on the night on the island. And even if I were surprised I wouldn't be worrying. We business men put reporters in most any category, but we never class them with buzzards. That's one thing you can say for a newspaper man; he's never hovering about a dead one."

"Mr. Brand," he said, "I fear that you won't construe this visit as a compliment. I am not here to inquire into your business, past, present or future. I come in behalf of a friend."

Brand flicked some ashes from his cigar onto his plush carpet and inquired:

"Did he send you?"

"No."

"Then the advantage is mine," said the millionaire coolly. "I am listening."

"You came over to Staten Island some four weeks ago. You came on business. Were you successful?"

Brand folded his hands behind his head. He leaned back in his chair. His brows contracted. He laid his cigar down on the desk. He took it up. He looked out of the window. He looked at Dick.

"My friend," he said, "you had better ask Reynolds."

The reporter jumped to his feet. "Leave Reynolds out of it," he commanded. "It took you a long while to think of that, and you know you don't mean it. You know Bob Reynolds wouldn't tell me anything that another man had told him in confidence. He would hold it sacred even—even if it came from you."

Brand dropped his mask; dropped it with a crash; a good crack is never a coward. He went around his desk almost at a run and pointed a finger an inch from the reporter's face.

"Now you be nice," he ordered in no uncertain tone. "You're here for trouble and you'll get it. But if you want to stay at all be nice. You heard me."

Dick met his stare full-faced. But he had erred. He knew it.

"I heard you," he said, "and I beg your pardon—to the extent that I regret my pleasantries. But be on the level, Brand. It's just you and me; not Reynolds. Don't pretend. If you want to give me the passports, say the word. But if you don't, let's talk like men."

"All right, then. I don't think Reynolds told you a word. But I think you know a lot. Damn me, if you reporters would only turn your wits to some good ends, how much better off you'd be and how much better off the world would be."

"The point of view there," said Dick with a smile, "is what constitutes good ends. For my part I would not include in such traits the desire to take other men's wives out joy riding. We have agreed to dispense with pleasantries. I speak of facts."

Brand took it coolly.

"Well, what then?" he asked.

"That's what I'm here to learn. I know a lot but I would like to learn more."

"Then I guess your mission's futile," said the millionaire.

"Perhaps. But I haven't run dry. Tennessee Coal and Iron dropped a few points today."

"It sure did," Brand acquiesced. "I can swear to that."

"A lot of poor fools lost their money."

"I shouldn't be surprised. They usually do."

"But you didn't."

"Why, my boy, you flatter me. But, frankly, I won a lot of money."

Brand left his desk again. This time he walked slowly to the reporter's side.

"But what the devil are you driving at?" he asked with face protruding. "Are you here with threats? Do you think I am afraid of you or your kind?" He snapped his fingers in the reporter's face. "That," he taunted. "That!"

The blood mounted to Dick's cheeks, but his endurance was not all spent.

"Do I look at all threatening?" he asked. "Have I said anything that sounded like threats?"

"No," said Brand with a sneer, "but you are still without an overcoat."

A fist shot out. It landed with a thud. Some two hundred pounds of very pretentious flesh and bone lay stretched upon the floor. The reporter glanced quickly about him. There was a stationary washstand in a corner. He stepped to it, soaked a towel in the running water and laid it over the millionaire's face and head. It did the work. Brand's eyes rolled and opened. Assured of returned consciousness, Dick stooped again and raised his victim to a sitting posture.

"Shall I stay or go?" he asked.

"You'd better go," Brand answered feebly.

"No hard feelings?"

"None at all; only—and here spoke the fighting man—I've got quite a punch of my own and I might be tempted to use it."

"All right," the reporter answered, "only remember, though you worship the golden calf, to take cognizance, also, of the golden rule. Be nice."

Left alone, Brand rubbed the point of his chin and got to his feet. He walked over to the glass to inspect the damage.

"A very neat young man," he said aloud. "I couldn't have done it better myself. I suppose I deserved it. But—him!" he exclaimed. "What can a man expect when he goes about without an overcoat and the thermometer at thirty-five?"

CHAPTER XIV.

More Feathers.

Dick's interview with Brand was barren of results—for Dick. He felt no remorse over the manner of its termination. It was a blow struck when a man must strike. Brand had misjudged him, or pretended he had. Either that, or, in pique over the reporter's knowledge of his action, he had lost control of that usual deliberate self-possession and hurried out the insult. In any event, he had overstepped the mark and paid the price.

Dick's only regret was his failure to accomplish the purpose of his visit, although he could not have told exactly what that was. Within himself he argued that he was acting for Bob; trying to save his friend from the humiliating sequel that was sure to follow Brand's underhanded tactics with Mrs. Reynolds. But for four weeks he had known of these clandestine meetings and Bob was still in ignorance of them. He was sincere in his desire to help his friend and a half-dozen times he had been on the point of telling him. But something stopped him. He thought of confronting Jane, but the idea was quickly put aside. Dick stood a little in awe of Jane. Admiration he had aplenty, or had had, but there was something more. It was reluctance to surrender this admiration and this inexplicable something that held him back. So he sought out Brand as a last resort. From the millionaire he hoped to wring something that would bolster up his falling respect for the girl, and also he hoped to force Brand to discontinue his visits. Brand had not misjudged entirely. The reporter had meant to threaten, but with a different motive. Brand's mistake had cut short the interview, and perhaps it was just as well. For Dick had not shown his hand and his attempt to frighten Brand would have been futile, anyway.

But the reporter had not come unprepared. There are some credulous fools who believe that no one ever knows the winner of a derby until the race is run; that the telegram is never read until the recipient tears the envelope; that when ten thousand men lose money on the stock market and five hundred win, it is just luck or better judgment that turns the trick. But Dick knew better. Dick knew that Tennessee Coal and Iron had dropped fifteen points and that Brand had sold. Dick knew that the Hudson Cement company, which was Brand, was furnishing the cement for the Pecos River dam; and Dick knew that the Western Construction company, which paid Bob to analyze the cement that went into the jobs, was building the dam. Dick knew something about millionaires. He knew that such men as Brand have a habit of stubbing their toes and that on such occasions it was not unusual for them to kick up a bit of gold. All this he knew; but he was speedily to learn more.

He went back to the office of his paper after his encounter with Brand and was sitting chatting idly with his city editor when a boy announced that there was a telephone call for "m. He went into the booth.

"Hello, Dick," called the voice of Reynolds. "Tomorrow's Wednesday, isn't it?"

"It will be, old top," the reporter answered, "if some obstreperous planet doesn't get in our way and mix things up a bit."

Reynolds laughed over the phone.

"Accuracy," he said. "There you go again. But that's the very thing I want you for. Dick, I've got the biggest job on my hands for tomorrow that I've ever had—that is, from a literary standpoint. Got to prepare an extensive report on the Pecos dam contract and I thought if you were coming over for the usual debauch you might come a little earlier and lend a helping hand."

"Surest thing you know, I'll be there. What time?"

"About three."

"All right. I'll be there like a duck. How's the missus?"

Poor Bob! Their quarrel was fresh in his mind. But the telephone saved him.

"Fine," he answered. "So long."

That evening Reynolds said nothing to his wife about the work to be done at home. He had no object in keeping it from her, but since their final disagreement over Brand and his offer both had felt constrained and distant. It was simply that there was nothing in their conversation that led up to his telling and neither had been in the mood for exchanging confidences. In the morning it was the same. Consequently, when he left she was in ignorance that he and Dick were to come early in the afternoon.

Shortly after luncheon Jane received a telegram from Brand announcing his intention to call that afternoon. She summoned Frieda.

"Go over to Mrs. Collins and ask her if she can run over for a minute," she ordered.

While the girl was gone the door-bell rang. Jane ran to answer it with a little glad cry of expectancy. She was looking for a package from a Fifth Avenue store and she was not disappointed. She opened the long box and took out an up-to-date automobile coat. It was a handsome garment, not so very expensive, from the standpoint of those who indulge in such luxuries, but quite out of reach of the Reynolds' humble means. This was the most showy article she had bought with Brand's money and it was a bold step.

Roman Laws Against Suicide.

Roman laws, permeated with stoic doctrines, looked indulgently upon those who took their own life and frowned only when this means was employed to evade punishment for some capital offense. Retribution, however, followed the suicide, for his goods were confiscated unless some measures were taken to placate the reigning and angered Caesar.

The Late Pope Pius X.

Elected Pope in 1903.

Giuseppe Melchiorre Sarto, known to the world as Pope Pius X, was elected to the papacy on August 4, 1903, during his occupancy of his exalted office as head of the Roman Catholic church he was confronted with some of the most momentous problems of the modern government, with which the Holy See has had to deal in modern times.

Pope Pius was born on June 2, 1855, at Riese, in the Venetian provinces. The first child of his parents, Sarto, a postman and his wife Maria, a peasant, he was brought up in the village priest, who took a liking for the boy, taught him to read and write and drummed into the youthful head the rudiments of Latin. At the age of eleven years he entered the seminary at Castelfranco, not far from his birthplace, and for four years every day he tramped to school, usually barefooted, and reached the seminary on his shoes to keep up appearances.

From Castelfranco he passed in 1870 to the seminary at Padua, and in 1875, at the age of 20, he was ordained priest and took up his studies at Rome. In 1877 he had his first parish of importance, that at Salzano, where he remained for eleven years. In addition to his ecclesiastical duties, Father Sarto contributed largely to the support of his mother and sisters, who found life a hard struggle, especially in the winter.

Record as Theologian.

His eloquence led to his being called at the age of 40 to Treviso as chancellor of the diocese, and shortly after he was appointed professor of Theology in the seminary. Nine years of strenuous work followed, crowned, in 1884, by his assuming the mitre as Bishop of Mantua.

Leo XIII conferred upon Bishop Sarto the title of "Roman Count," and in the Consistory of June, 1893, created him cardinal, giving him the Roman church of San Bernardo from which to take his title. He was so poor that he was unable to pay the fees connected with the acceptance of the new dignity, but some of the admirers came forward and provided him with the necessary funds.

Creating him cardinal, Leo XIII, appointed him also Patriarch of Venice, but he did not leave Mantua until a year later, owing to conflict between the Italian government and the Holy See, over the right of the House of Savoy to be consulted before the appointment of a patriarch, the rights of the Republic of Venice. Sarto was cut short by the death of Leo XIII, and was succeeded by Cardinal Sarto as Patriarch of Venice.

The patriarch's relations with the House of Savoy were always most cordial. Every time that their majesties came to visit and presented him homage. He was one of Queen Margherita's confessors, and only a few months before the death of Leo XIII, in public when he (the patriarch) blessed the foundation stone of the new Campanile in Piazza San Marco. He was the candidate of Leo XIII, as his successor, but he left realized the outcome when he left Rome, he bought a return ticket in the Conclave.

A "Compromise" Pontiff.

In the Conclave the struggle was for and against Cardinal Rampolla, Leo XIII's Secretary of State, whose chances were lost when Cardinal Puzyna pronounced the veto of Austria against him, which veto was supposed to represent the "compromise" vote. Then, needing a "compromise" vote, all eyes turned to Cardinal Sarto, who at first refused, but was afterward induced to accept the high position, being elected almost unanimously on August 4, assuming the title of:

Pope Pius X, Bishop of Rome and Vicar of Jesus Christ, Successor of St. Peter, Prince of the Apostles, Supreme Pontiff of the Universal Church, Patriarch of the West, Primate of Italy, Roman Province and Sovereign of the Temporal Dominions of the Holy Roman church.

The pontificate of Pope Pius X. was characterized by that spirit of modesty which never abandoned him and by that strong religious feeling which made him choose as motto, "To restore everything to Christ." The day after his coronation he was asked to give orders for his private apartments in the Vatican, and while he was there the then young Monsignore Merry del Val, his pro-Secretary of State, to occupy the gorgeous Borgia apartment, he himself chose four small rooms in the lower wing of the Vatican, which under Leo XIII, had been occupied by his private secretary, Mgr. Angel.

Health Breaks Under Strain.

Pius X. desired to give himself up entirely to his work, and so doing he did not spare any fatigue, and giving audiences, admitting people to large receptions, celebrating masses, preaching, giving communion, reached such a point of exhaustion that while in the exercise of his priestly function in the Pauline Chapel, crowded with people, he fainted, and thus started that report which pursued him ever after—that he was liable to fainting fits, which was quite untrue, as that was the only occasion on which he suffered in that way, and it was entirely due to the heat and the vitiated air of the chapel.

That was the first opportunity for the officials of the Vatican to step in, and on the pretext of protecting the Pope's health, attempt gradually to isolate him from the world. However, they were not always successful. One of the yearly American pilgrimages had left the United States at the beginning of July, 1903. On their way to Europe Leo XIII, who should have received them, died, so they were in Rome during the Conclave, and the day on which Pius X. was elected and descended into St. Peter's to give his first benediction they were in the Basilica, with two American flags waving over the immense crowd assembled there, and joining hurray to the cheering which greeted the venerable figure. Some days after the same American pilgrimage was in the Vatican gardens when suddenly the work of the officials having already begun, they were ordered away by the Pope as being approaching. With true American determination they objected that they did not want to leave. Pius X., who understood something of what was going on inquired, and Cardinal Gibbons, who was among those who accompanied them, explained that it was a pilgrimage of his countrymen who desired to pay homage to the Holy Father. They had asked for an audience and were waiting for the appointed day. The pontiff immediately said there was no necessity to wait, and he would receive the Americans at once in the adjoining Museum Lapidarium. Thus Pius X. received the first pilgrimage of his pontificate, held in his hands as the first, with the exception of those which are still preserved, one in Rome and one in New York.

Contraventions With States.

Pius X. did not intend to change the substance of the policy which his two predecessors had followed towards Italy. His protests against the loss of the Temporal Power, however, lost the vehemence and bitterness which formerly characterized them. The strongest of his protests on this subject was when President Loubet "disregarding the prohibition to all Catholic rulers and heads of states to visit the King of United Italy in his capital," was the first, with the exception of Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria, since 1870, to go as guest to the Quirinal.

This, however, was not only caused by the feeling towards Italy but much more by the state of religious war with France, which was the most remarkable event in the last pontificate, and of which many have attributed the responsibility to Pope X., while the hostilities had already begun under Leo XIII.

France found imitators in Spain, which passed in parliament bills against the religious congregations and the clergy, leading to the recall of the Spanish ambassador accredited to the Holy See; and in Portugal, where the republic proclaimed on October 5, 1910, brought about a complete separation between church and state, the expulsion of religious congregations and the confiscation of their properties.

Relations With Italy.

While such serious crises were taking place between the Vatican and some of the Latin countries, which had been known in history as the most faithful to the Holy See, the relations with Italy, while maintaining in the outside form the usual character of hostility were in substance much more cordial.

It would take long to enumerate all the reforms of a religious character initiated by Pius X., such as that of restoring every Gregorian chant, of preaching every Sunday from a text from the Bible, himself giving the good example by having as long as his strength allowed him the faithful of the different parishes of Rome in the courtyard of San Damaso to hear him explain the Gospel story and carrying out one after the other as Pope the same ideas and principles which he had confessed and advocated as Bishop and Patriarch. One of his undertakings will leave an important mark in the history of the papacy—the codification of ecclesiastical law. He entrusted the work to an illustrious scholar in Canon Law, Mgr. Pietro Gasparri, on whom he conferred the Red Hat in December, 1907. Another epoch-making task was that of the revision of the Vulgate, which he confided to Father Francis Aidan Gasquet, Abbott-President of the English Benedictine Congregation so well known as a learned historian.

Pius X. was determined to restore the most iron discipline among the clergy, and this led to an unrelenting campaign against that section of ecclesiastics who professed orthodox opinions and were called Modernists. The encyclical promulgated on September 8, 1907, condemned the Modernists and their doctrines.

Flight on Modernists.

Following the several leaders of the Modernist movement were excommunicated in Italy, England and Germany. The Pope displayed even greater energy on November 18, 1907, when he reaffirmed the necessity of combating by every possible means the spirit of rebellion, and ordered the Bishops to watch and if necessary to dismiss the professor infected with the condemned doctrines and to prevent from taking orders those students who were suspected of sympathizing with the movement.

New rebellions broke out, and Pope X. went further in the struggle, with a new encyclical, in May, 1909, and more so by imposing the anti-modernist oath on all ecclesiastics. The pontiff roused a storm of opposition, to himself entirely unexpected, by his encyclical against the Protestants in general and those of the German Reformation in particular, on the occasion of the centennial of St. Charles Borromeo.

Another very important reform due to Pius X. is that of the Roman Curia, which was still ruled by the Bull of Sixtus V. of January, 1586. The reform of the offices, the ecclesiastical courts and the Roman congregations, withdrawing America, Canada, Newfoundland, Great Britain, Holland and Luxembourg, from the jurisdiction of Propaganda Fide, restoring them therefore from among the missionary countries and putting them, together with the rest of the Catholic world, under the Consistorial Congregation.

Friendship for America.

To Americans Pius X. was especially interesting. His great friendship for this country, his frequent audiences to Americans, both Catholic and non-Catholic, and his interest in American affairs kept him in close touch with this side of the Atlantic than perhaps any pontiff that has preceded him. He was an ardent admirer of Theodore Roosevelt, and had the ex-President's writings translated for reading yet, as will be recalled, events occurring at the time of Mr. Roosevelt's visit to Rome led to the cancellation of his visit to the Vatican. Former Vice-President Charles W. Fairbanks had a somewhat similar experience, and the incident created widespread interest in this country and in Europe at the same time.

Dried Plants Shown in Millions.

Kew gardens, London, England, possesses one of the biggest collections of dried plants in the world—a collection which is constantly being added to by travelers and scientific institutions in all parts of the globe. To show how huge this collection really is, one bouquet, that of Sir W. G. Hooker, contained no fewer than two million specimens of dried plants.

SEVERAL ROADS ARE CLOSED TO TRAFFIC

County Highway Commissioner Moore Makes Statement on Conditions of Highways Under Construction.

In a statement issued today County Highway Commissioner C. E. Moore tells of the condition of the county highways now under construction and indicates roads which are closed to traffic. He says that the recent rains have softened the roads that are under process of construction, therefore it is advisable to inform the public as to the roads which are in fit condition for travel. It has been necessary to suspend the daily bulletins owing to the press of business.

"The four mile road north of Janesville is being heavily graded and is unsafe for travel.

"The Hanover road in the town of Rock and also the Hanover-Orderville road in the town of Plymouth are likewise badly torn up and are practically impassable during this wet weather. Take the upper Footville road instead.

"Work is completed in the bridge of Beloit and the Happy Hollow town has been in the city a clear track between Janesville and Beloit on the east side of the river.

SEATTLE TO EXPERIMENT ON NEW SEGREGATING PLAN IN HIGH SCHOOL

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 20.—Educators today began work on the plan adopted by the city school board to segregate the boys and girls in the Broadway high school at the beginning of the fall semester. It will be the first time the experiment has been tried in Seattle. School officials deny that moral questions had anything to do with the adoption of the plan. Students whose parents oppose the segregation separate class room idea will have the privilege of attending any other high school in the city.

Not only planned to segregate the boys and girls, but Superintendent of Schools Cooper will assign, as far as possible, men teachers for the boys classes. "Because of intellectual and temperamental differences," he said, "it is thought that each works more effectively in separate classes, and that they enjoy such separation."

The cigar early became an article of commerce. Homemade cigars were smoked by Europeans in the North American colonies at the same time that pipe smoking became common. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer the Golden Rule for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

DOLLAR DAY

WEDNESDAY AUGUST 26th

The inaugurating of a Dollar Day is the result of a plan conceived by The Gazette Advertising Department and suggested by them to the merchants that they unite on one day twice each year to offer the public an opportunity to buy the remnants of their summer stocks at prices as low as can be made.

No matter how careful a merchant may choose his stock, at the end of the season he will find a certain amount of LEFT OVERS, that for some reason have not been sold. In QUALITY, STYLE AND PRICE they are the equal of his BEST SELLERS. The only thing at fault with these goods is that THEY HAVE NOT BEEN SOLD.

But two courses are open. The price may be cut to a point where they will sell or they can be carried over until another season. No merchant wishes to carry over goods. Therefore at the end of each season one price reduction follows another until the stocks are clean.

Dollar Day

Marks The Last Price Reduction

It is the grand finale of all the sales which have preceded it, and if the prices look so low that they seem hardly reliable, remember that they probably represent the last desperate effort of some merchant to sell you merchandise far below cost to him rather than carry it into another season.

Gazette Special

Monday August 24th

On this date The Gazette will carry a special edition of eight solid pages of Dollar Day advertising. Don't fail to secure a copy of this paper.

This page will sell anything for you at any time if you will use it consistently

We Shall Be Pleased To Demonstrate The Pulling Power of the Want Ad Page to You at Any Time

For Sale: Ford car. Used one year. In good condition throughout. Reason for selling—owner needs larger car. No reasonable offer refused. This is a bargain for someone, and will pay you to investigate. Call 789, Green.

The above ad cost more than what used to be termed a "want ad" price for an ad. But, it was a splendid investment of the advertiser's money. It sold his car and it sold it quick. In fact, it sold it before he was just ready to let it slide. He had no idea how quick these silent little "pullers" worked.

This is a local case. You know the man—far better than we do. He is one of your business friends that you say, "Howdy" to every day. He always did believe in advertising. Are you as progressive (and wise) as he? How much have you ever used this page? Do you by actual demonstration, know its power? Well? What?

MADISON GERMANS ENDORSE WILSON'S PEACE INTENTIONS

Strict Neutrality by United States is Appreciated at Mass Meeting Held Last Night.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., August 20.—Expressing loyalty and devotion to the principle of strict neutrality maintained by the United States in the European conflict, the Madisonians of German birth and descent, met last night at a mass meeting of nearly 700 people in the high school building to adopt resolutions presented by Justice R. G. Siebeck of the supreme court expressing the above sentiment. The adoption of the resolutions was preceded by short addresses by Prof. A. R. Hoffeld, Rev. Howard R. Gold of the English Lutheran church, Rev. Joseph Koester of St. James Catholic church and Mayor A. H. Kayser of Madison.

Dr. E. J. H. Voss of the German department of the university presided. The meeting was opened by the Mannerchor and the audience singing "Watch on the Rhine." The purpose of the address is expressed in the resolution adopted by the mass meeting which follows:

"We, citizens of Madison, Wisconsin, who are of German birth and descent, having assembled in mass meeting to deplore the existing state of war between the great nations of Europe, that we are deeply grieved at the disastrous results which its continuance must inflict upon the most beneficent achievements of the race, and that our hearts bleed at the thought of the threatened sacrifices of innumerable human lives.

"We deem it our privilege and duty to express our loyalty and devotion to the principle of strict neutrality adopted by the United States of America in relation to the pending conflict, we heartily commend the president of our country in an endeavor to mediate in the interests of peace, and we pledge him our loyal support in any steps that he may be privileged to make toward this end.

"We firmly believe that the maintenance of this state of neutrality on the part of our country will be gravely endangered if as a people we do not succeed in preventing the use of our arms and the use of our land and sea forces in the interests of the war. We cannot expect to be acceptable and effective as a mediating power, commanding the respect and confidence of the warring parties, unless we are willing to withhold our judgment until full and authentic data are at hand; and it is our firm conviction that the information thus far available through the press of this country is far from supplying us a full and impartial report of the true causes of the war, and also of the steps taken by representatives of each power to effect a settlement of the conflict.

"We deplore that the press news of this and foreign countries has in many important instances not only proven to be without foundation of fact, but even to have been purposely created to create a false public opinion and to arouse a partisan spirit derogatory to the good name of Germany and her allies. We condemn such a course as offensive to the American sense of fair play, as a serious menace to our neutral position among the great nations, and as a cause of distrust and dissension at home and of discord and enmity abroad.

"We emphatically protest against the unproven assertion of a part of the German press that the Austrian and German emperors were actuated by selfish, unworthy, and unjustifiable motives in their treatment of the issues leading to international differences, and that they are the responsible agents that have caused this war.

"We also protest against the claim of a part of our local press that the German-American citizens of this community and state have no confidence in the righteousness of the cause of Germany and her allies and that they do not sympathize with her in this hour of her severest trials. We emphatically deny the above charges and charge and desire to express our unshaken trust in the patriotic devotion of these nations to the highest interests of humanity.

"We express our heartfelt sympathy for the men and women who are being subjected to the hardships and sacrifices of war, especially those to whom we are related by ties of blood and kinship, and we pledge ourselves to do all within our power to alleviate their suffering and distress.

"It is all over," he said, and turned the other side of the hand, after which they intoned prayers for the dead.

Immediately after candle lights flickered in all the windows, and the whole personnel of the apostolic palace, with the permission of the papal secretary, passed by the body, kissing the hand of the pontiff as they passed. Throughout the night messages had been received from the head of many states inquiring the conditions of his holiness. All were immediately notified of his death by Cardinal Sarraceni.
